Welcome to the 2012 International Recruiting Fair!

We’re glad you’re here. These international schools are excited to meet you and to see how you might fit into their team overseas. International Christian schools need qualified, passionate individuals with a variety of skill sets to minister to the children of missionaries and other expatriate families, and maybe some national students, too. Whether you’re serious about working abroad or just curious about the possibilities, you can use this guide to make the most of your time here at the fair. Thanks for coming!

What to Expect

Typically, two types of people are interested in the ACSI International Recruiting Fair:

The first is curious about the possibility of teaching overseas, desires to look at the options, and wants to get information to see where God might take them in the future. If this describes you, here are a few suggestions to make the most of this face-to-face opportunity.

- Use your time to throw out your net and get information on as many opportunities as possible. Often, just going through the process of researching, applying, etc., provides options you may not have thought of before and helps you refine exactly what you want to do.

- Before you arrive, take a moment to jot down the key issues or concerns you might have about the logistics of teaching overseas. Make a point of asking as many representatives as possible about these issues.

- Come ready to learn as much as you can about the process, opportunities, and distinguishing factors of the schools or regions in which you are interested. This is your time to gather as much information as possible and talk personally with those who work at international Christian schools.

- Most importantly, come prayed up! Spend time with the Lord in advance, telling Him what you are thinking and feeling about working overseas. Ask for clear direction, answers to your questions, and openness to whatever He might have in store for you.

The second type of individual is looking for a job at an international Christian school during the next school year or at some point in the future. If you fall into this category, preparing properly for the recruiting fair will put you on track to minister internationally.

- Research the schools in which you are most interested before you show up at the recruiting fair. Communicate directly with the schools and mission organizations with whom you would most like to work.
• Start the application process for schools and missions organizations you are strongly considering. Let them know that you would like to talk with them personally at the ACSI recruiting fair. If interested schools know that you will be attending the recruiting fair, they might schedule an official interview with you before you even arrive.

• Update your resume and have clean, professional copies available to hand out to school administrators and missions recruiters.

• Dress professionally with resumes in hand, and come ready for on-the-spot interviews.

Regardless of which category you fit into, the administrators and recruiters of 30+ ACSI member international Christian schools look forward to interacting with you, answering your questions, and helping you pursue job options in the world of international Christian education.

Missionary Teachers, Stipends and Salaries

It is important to note that many Christian schools overseas are looking for missionary teachers. International Christian schools are often established to serve the children of Christian missionaries. To help subsidize the cost of missionary kid (MK) education, these schools require that their teachers come under a mission organization and raise their own support. As a result, you will not only see school administrators at the ACSI recruiting fair, but you will also see a variety of interdenominational mission organizations that are recruiting for various international schools where the children of their missionaries attend.

Not all international Christian schools require you to raise your own support, though. Roughly 30% of ACSI member international Christian schools offer a partial salary and/or some sort of benefits or stipend package to help supplement the amount of support a missionary teacher needs to raise; another 20% of our schools offer competitive salary and benefit packages, including airfare, etc.
